

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

TO C—

BY STARK YOUNG

STRANGE, is it not, that I most prize in you
The one thing that the many would remove,
The ultimate beginning of my love
Be where they mark the change that should ensue.
It is that you see not as they must do,
And could not so, however much you strove;
It is the binding wings that close above;
The impalpable, bright fire before your view.

Look not from those immortal eyes away,
The invisible and gigantic scene is set,
The wild gods' laughter is up, their passion
rife:

And though the unmolded figure of the day
Slip from your absent fingers, you shall yet
Breathe on to-morrow's dust the shape of life.
STARK YOUNG.